

9/1/24 Question for Discussion

Work Stories

Labor Day was first suggested as a national holiday in the 1880s, for the specific purpose of honoring those "who from rude nature have delved and carved all the grandeur we behold." So, as we celebrate Labor Day, let's talk together about our own labors. Try some of these questions to start things off:

What was the first job you ever had?

What was the best job you ever had?

What was the worst job you ever had?

What work did you do for most of your life?

What did your parents do for a living? Were your own work choices influenced by theirs?

If you were young and choosing a career today, which would you choose? Would you do the same work you did, or would you train for something different? And if you were to pick something different, what would it be, and why would you choose it?

What, besides salary, do you think are the most important criteria for a good job?

Happy Labor Day!